REFLECTION: REFLECTION

Lord, we remember the day when your son Jesus found us washing our nets, discouraged since we were toiling all night and catching nothing. He said to us, “Put out into deep water,” and because he said so, we paid out our nets there. We netted such a huge quantity of fish that our nets began to tear so that we signaled to companions in other boats to come and help us and even theirs were filled to sinking point. We were completely overcome at the catch we made and we fell on our knees in awe before you. We knew then that we must make a change in our lives, and focus on leading people into your net. We brought our boats back to land and left everything and followed Jesus. Lord, our country is toiling all night to solve our problems of crime, domestic violence and unemployment and catching nothing. Send us leaders like Jesus who will challenge us to put out into the deep waters of building a culture of love and pay out our nets there, so that we may experience a miraculous catch, and be so completely overcome that we will fall at your knees saying, “Leave us Lord, we are sinners.” But we need not be afraid, just bring those boats of selfishness to the land, leave them there and follow you.

1. Vocation is linked to our integrity. Vocation is not about doing a job, a specific common activity or a formal ministry in the church (although it may include any or all of these), but about being a person who is ‘in Christ’ and who seeks in every aspect of her /his life to act in Christ. I must become the person God calls me to become and must act in my world honestly as that person.

2. Vocation is all embracing. It is always tempting to say ‘my vocation is X’ when there is a .l,hint that any other vocation is excluded. But just as life can turn up all sorts of situations, so acting in Christ can take any number of forms. Because the whole of the creation is called towards the perfection of the kingdom, so every aspect of life involved in the vocations of those of us who live and work that part of the creation.

3. Vocation may embrace a formal ministry, but ministry is not be confused with liturgical abilities or canonical status. In church there will be people who have the skills within body of Christ to serve their fellow Christians with the lie skills they need as a church. These skills will then fall . . the specific vocations of the members of that church, every member of that church has a vocation whether or ‘it is a specific skill for the community.

The miraculous catch of fish was a historical event in the life of Jesus, but also a symbol of the deep conversion experiences which God grants us from time to time and which set us on a new course in our lives. These experiences usually occur at times when we feel we are stagnating – as spouses, parents, friends, church leaders, ministers, or managers in the work place. We are toiling all night and catching nothing. Then one day God sends Jesus to us and he tells us to “put out into deep water” – to move in a new, and frightening, direction. The message might come from a person or a sermon, a book, a television program, a news item in the papers. Sometimes Jesus speaks to us from a negative experience – failure, rejection, falling into a sin we thought we would never commit, recognition that we are addicted to drugs or drink or power.

We each have our deep water we must put out into: be reconciled with someone we have refused to speak to for years; give up devotions we love and move to a more contemplative prayer; start working among the poor; get involved in community development; go back to school; join AA; do a Marriage Encounter weekend or a Life in the Spirit seminar. We put out objections like St Peter’s: “we have toiled all night,” “what will happen if...,” “we tried this before and it didn’t work,” and so on. But we do it anyway and it works – relationships take on new life, classes or work-places become places of inspiration, our prayer life takes off – so much so that our problem now becomes how to cope with all we have to do: our nets begin to tear.

We feel overwhelmed: “Leave me Lord, I am a sinner.” We who were totally bored now have a feeling of awe at the privilege of being spouse, parent, teacher in classroom or parish, or just to be a baptised Christian.

Life has value when we give it, when we give it in love, in truth; when we give it to others, in everyday life, in the family. Human trafficking is a terrible violation of human dignity. Let us open our eyes to this shameful scourge and commit ourselves to fighting it. We all need to be healed, and we can all heal others if we are humble and meek: with a good word, with patience, with a glance.

This Visit to the United Arab Emirates belongs to the "surprises" of God. So let us praise Him and His providence, and pray that the seeds sown may bring forth fruits of peace.

The Beatitudes are a roadmap for our life: they invite us to keep our hearts pure, to practice meekness and justice, to be merciful to all, to live affliction in union with God. The Document on Human Fraternity, which I signed today in Abu Dhabi with my brother the Grand Imam of Al -Azhar, invites all persons who have faith in God and faith in human fraternity to unite and work together.
